● In January, the graphic novel X-Men 2099 Oasis by the Hildenbrandt brothers will be featured on 90 cards. Inserts include chromium cards (1:12) and autographs. SRP is $1.99 for eight-card packs.

Each press sheet measures 28-by-40 inches and features all 90 Lady Death 3 cards and five oversized cards.

The uncut sheets will be sold beginning in February and won't be offered again.

● Razor, the dark mistress of vengeance from London Knight Studios, is featured on a Chromium print featuring the art of Kyle Hotz. Each print measures 11-by-14 inches. There are also 250 signed versions available with the signature of Razor creator Everette Hartsoe.

WildStorm characters put into sticky situations

WildStorm Productions' trading card division is launching a new product line in January – WildStorm Stickers.

Packaged like trading cards and selling at a low price point ($1.50 for eight stickers), WildStorm Stickers are 90 individually die-cut stickers featuring WildStorm's characters.

Featured artists for the stickers include Jim Lee, J. Scott Campbell, Travis Charest, Aron Wiesenfeld, Tom Raney, Brett Booth, Richard Bennett, Dan Norton, Mat Broom and others. Each sticker comes die-cut on its own backing card

"I'm very excited about WildStorm developing a new product line with these stickers," said company VP/consumer products Ted Adams.

The Search for Spock and the rest

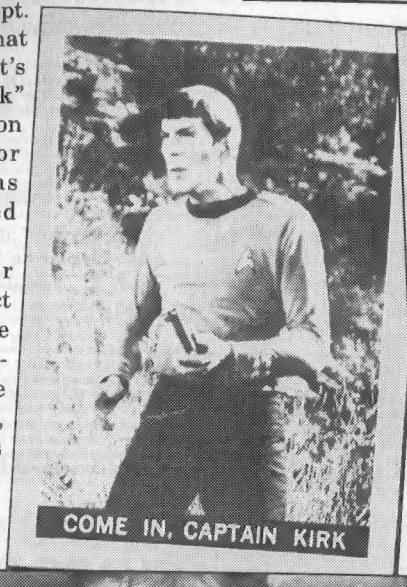
By Kurt Samuels

For Trekkers, their collection isn't complete without these 50 sets

For most people, Sept. 8, 1966, means as much as, say, March 28, 1974, June 15, 1985, or Aug. 24, 1996. It's just another date on the calendar.

But for others, Sept. 8, 1966, is a date that will live forever. It's the day "Star Trek" made its premiere on television and for some, it has completely changed their lives.

Trekkies (or for you politically correct types, Trekkers) have followed the teachings of Spock and the stern, but fair, commands of Kirk as a protocol for life itself.



While non-Trek fans may not understand this devotion, mass marketers of Trek merchandise have learned that these fans will buy anything Star Trek.

Plates, pajamas, screen savers, rubber ears, etc. If it's licensed by the gods at Paramount, then it must be bought. That includes entertainment cards.

Star Trek is the king of entertainment cards. No other title has incorporated more sets. And, with the exception of Star Wars and Wacky Packages, no other series has caused more controversy.

We will look at the major Star Trek releases, chase cards and promos, along with some fringe and parody sets.

(Note: This is by no way a comprehensive list of Trek or Trek related cards. If you have something not on this list, drop us a note. We'll update this in future issues.)

Star Trek

Producer: Leaf
Released: 1967
No. of Cards: 72
Distinguishing Factors: It's the first and, by far, it's the funniest Trek set. What makes it so is the card backs which, in some cases, have little to do with an actual Star Trek plot.

It begins with the first card, appropriately entitled "Teeny Bobber." The plot is this: A weird gas causes Spock to believe he is a 1967 "teeny bopper." It only gets better from there.

Strange But True: There are actually three of the original sets: the 1967 Leaf version; an unauthorized reprint set and a "European version." The reprint states on the back "1981 reprint" and sells between $25 and $35.

The European version is a different story, and is almost as bizarre as the backs of these cards. The cards were "found" in mint condition in a warehouse in Europe. They were brought here and sold. The cards have no markings on the surface which distinguish themselves from the originals, but do have a different dot pattern when examined under a microscope. The European version sells between $60 and $90 (but questions regarding its authenticity have seen prices drop).

Star Trek

Producer: Gordon Currie
Released: 1968
No. of Cards: 8
Distinguishing Factors: Measuring 1½ x 3 ½ inches, the cards feature black-and-white sketches of cast members.

Star Trek

Producer: Topps
Released: 1976
No. of Cards: 88 with 22 stickers
Distinguishing Factors: Arguably the best Star Trek set of the lot. This set had those cool die-cut stickers Topps loved to do.
Strange But True: The Australian version uses the same design, but has less cards and are in different chronological order.

Star Trek: The Motion Picture

Producer: Topps
Released: 1979
No. of Cards: 88 with 22 stickers
Distinguishing Factors: I would say that this set featured a lot of action from the film, but for those who've seen the flick know there wasn't any action.

Strange But True: The set's best feature? The tag lines on the cards. I really do miss those one-sentence kickers.

Star Trek: The Motion Picture

Producer: Rainbo Bread
Released: 1979
No. of Cards: 33
Distinguishing Factors: Found in loaves of bread (but not replacing any of the slices), the set featured studio shots and brief plot outlines.

Strange But True: Though mostly known as a Rainbo set, the cards were also found in loaves of Kilpatrick and Colonial Bread.

Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan

Producer: FTCC
Released: 1982
No. of Cards: 30
Distinguishing Factors: Do you think Topps is kicking itself for letting the Trek license get away? After Topps, FTCC took over with this 30 card set. (See sidebar)

Strange But True: The cards measure 5 x 7 inches.

Star Trek III: Search For Spock

Producer: FTCC
Released: 1984
No. of Cards: 80
Distinguishing Factors: No more postcard sized cards. (See sidebar)

Star Trek IV

Producer: FTCC
Released: 1987
No. of Cards: 60
Distinguishing Factors: See sidebar.

Star Trek 25th Annviversary

Producer: Impel
Released: 1991, 1992
No. of Cards: 310 (160 in series I, 150 in series II)
No. of Chase Cards: Four holograms
No. of Promo Cards: 8
Distinguishing Factors: The first card set that linked the original Star Trek series and the Next Generation. In addition there was a Tin Set produced, which included all the cards and chasers, plus two cards exclusive to the set. Also each tin came with a certificate of authenticity.

Strange But True: In one of the more strange collations in card history, the Impel (now Fleer/SkyBox) set featured classic Star Trek cards on odd-numbered cards and Next Generation cards on the even-numbered cards. SInce there were similar features to both subsets (like episodes, actors, merchandising, etc.), it would follow that they would match each other. Unforntunately, someone forgot to factor in the different numbers of episodes for each show, so they match like Tribbles with Klingons, which caused some Trekkers to turn into 1967 Teeny Boppers.

Star Trek: The Next Generation

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1992
No. of Cards: 120
No. of Chase Cards: 5: four silver holograms in packs; one gold hologram available via mail-in offer

No. of Promo Cards: 8
Distinguishing Factors: The first TNG-only set. SkyBox also produced a tin set, in which 10,000 were produced. The tin set includes

FTCC a forgotten Star Trek card maker

Tiny company produced Trekker cards for movies 2-4

In between the large publically owned corporations who produced the Star Trek cards, there was a little card company named the Fantasy Trading Card Company which held the license for movies two, three and four.

FTCC is owned by Mark and Val Macaluso, one of the most experienced and successful entertainment card dealers in the United States.

After having two card projects completed, FTCC applied for the Star Trek license after the release of the second movie because Topps didn't produce a set (sales of the 1979 set were not as good as the company hoped). FTCC did get a license, but not the card license. Instead, the company got permission to produce postcard-sized cards.

"When we approached Paramount, they were still hoping Topps would pick up the license, that's why when we did Star Trek II, we had to do the 5- x 7-inch format," said Mark Macaluso.

Topps never renewed the license; thus FTCC became the sole producer of the next two films. The results were some of the more rare Star Trek cards in history. For the three series, the print runs were as follows:

- Star Trek II: 250 12-box cases
- Star Trek III: 300 16-box cases
- Star Trek IV: 350 16-box cases

According to Macaluso, the production runs were low because he didn't sell the cards to the mass market.

"We never intended to sell the cards into the mass market because there was one prerequisite – you had to take returns [of product not sold]," he said. "I didn't want to do that."

After the fourth movie, Macaluso let the license lapse. There were no card sets of Star Trek Movies V and VI at the time the films were released, and Impel didn't pick up the license until 1991.

Looking back at the sets, Macaluso is very satisfied with the way they were produced. If he could add something to the cards that wasn't first available, it would be chase cards.

> "When we approached Paramount, they were still hoping Topps would pick up the license, that's why when we did Star Trek II, we had to do the 5- x 7-inch format."
> – Mark Macaluso
> co-owner of FTCC cards, with his wife Val

"One of things we did not have in our sets because it was not part of that time was that we didn't have any chase cards," he said. "If we were doing the sets today, we would put some kind of chase cards in, but we wouldn't make them impossible to get; we would make that you could get a complete set of chase cards in two or three boxes."

It has been more than five years since the last FTCC set. But the company is not in retirement. In fact, Macaluso said that when the time is right, FTCC may be back.

"We haven't produced a card set in five years because there has not been anything out there that has really grabbed me," he said. "We will eventually produce more cards, we just haven't been in the mood [laughs].

"But there has been an incredible deluge of titles in the past four years and the marketplace is extraordinarily competitive. And anything I do I would like it to be a success."

everything mentioned, plus one special bonus card and five foreign language cards.

Strange But True: The four hologram backs were reprinted due to some errors. There also may be an error checklist with Spot (Data's Cat) as No. 30 instead of Locutus.

ST: TNG Behind The Scenes

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1993
No. of Cards: 39
Distinguishing Factors: Another factory set, this time limited to only 50,000 total sets. It would have made a nice subset instead.

ST: Deep Space Nine Mini-Set

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1993
No. of Cards: 48
No. of Chase Cards: Two spectra cards
Distinguishing Factors: Another factory set. SkyBox produced 150,000 of the first ever DS9 set, which focused exclusively on the premier episode ("The Emissary").

Star Trek Master Series

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1993
No. of Cards: 90
No. of Chase Cards: Five spectra cards

No. of Promo Cards: 3
Distinguishing Factors: The first all-painted set which turned out to be one of the finest card sets (not just Trek sets) to be produced. The art is fabulous. It would be nice to see these cards made into Colossal-type (as in FPG) cards.

Star Trek: Deep Space Nine

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1994
No. of Cards: 100
No. of Chase Cards: Five spectra cards; one exchange card which can be redeemed for 10 foil-stamped, embossed cards

No. of Promo Cards: 2, 3 or 4 (read on)
Distinguishing Factors: A look at the first season of "DS9." Smartly designed, the set contains the Trek-geek must have episode guide (a first for a Trek set) along with other fun things like trivia.

Strange But True: So how many promos are there? There are two that SkyBox released en masse. A third promo was released in Malibu Comics' "DS9" comic. The fourth was issued in the mini-set released the year earlier.

Star Trek: TNG Episodes I

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1994
No. of Cards: 108
No. of Chase Cards: Six foil-stamped, embossed cards; 2 holithograms and one "All Good Things" card found one per box.

No. of Promo Cards: 2
Distinguishing Factors: Seeing the success of the "DS9" set, SkyBox ran the episode guide theory a second time to create a "bible" for TNG fans to follow. It worked (or should I say is still working).

The Making of Star Trek: TNG

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1994
No. of Cards: 100 base cards released in a collector's, gold and platinum editions.
Chase Cards: Collector's: five 3-D imagiscope cards; Gold: collector's pin; Platinum: holographic shim encased in lucite.
No. of Promo Cards: 0
Distinguishing Factors: This is when non-Trekkies began to say enough is enough. Having released a Behind the Scenes set just one year earlier, SkyBox comes out with these three sets. 50,000 of each were produced. The only difference is the price and the special gift. There is no truth in the rumor that SkyBox was to produce a titanium version which included a gold bust of Picard's head.
Strange But True: A collector in Canada actually bought all three sets!

Star Trek Master Series II

Producer: Star Trek
Released: 1994
No. of Cards: 100
No. of Chase Cards: Nine gold foils; four holograms

No. of Promo Cards: 2 or 4 (read on)
Distinguishing Factors: A partially painted set made up mostly of the cast from "DS9." Some of the cards are quite scary. They aren't painted, instead using a computer to brush over photos. Should have stuck to the successful Series I format.

Strange But True: Again with the promos. There are actually two versions of two cards. Featuring Argus Array and Gowron, one version is numbered (S1 and S2). The second version is not numbered but contains logos of two magazines.

Star Trek: Generations

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1994
No. of Cards: 72

No. of Chase Cards: Three foil-enhanced cards; Three spectra Captains cards; one SkyMotion redemption card; large-sized SkyMotion (4½ x 2½) available on wrapper return.
No. of Promo Cards: 1
Distinguishing Factors: Widescreen format.

Star Trek: TNG Episodes II

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1994
No. of Cards: 96
No. of Chase Cards: Six foil-stamped cards; two holograms

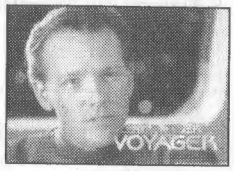
No. of Promo Cards: One
Distinguishing Factors: A continuation from the first Episode collection, all cards, including chase cards, are sequentially numbered where the first series left off.

Star Trek: Cinema Collection

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1995
No. of Cards: Six sets of 72 cards
No. of Promo Cards: A six-card pack of "Star Trek Generations" behind-the-scenes cards, available for those who bought all six sets through SkyBox.
Distinguishing Factors: All six flicks are featured in their own boxed set, including numbers V and VI, which are featured for the first time. The cards are in the widescreen format.

Star Trek:Voyager Series I

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1995
No. of Cards: 98
No. of Chase Cards: Nine spectra cards; three blueprint cards; one emergency holographic doctor hologram; one SkyMotion exchange card



No. of Promo Cards: Three: two cards and one four-card sheet
Distinguishing Factors: Based entirely on the premiere show, titled "Caretaker."
Strange But True: The four-card promo sheet could be found in repackaged boxes of Star Trek Master Series cards sold at Wal-Mart.

Star Trek: TNG Episodes III

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1995
No. of Cards: 108

No. of Chase Cards: Six foil-stamped cards; two holograms
No. of Promo Cards: One sheet
Distinguishing Factors: A continuation from the first two Episode collections, all cards, including chase cards, are sequentially numbered where the first series left off.

Star Trek: Voyager Series II

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1995
No. of Cards: 90 and one tattoo.
No. of Chase Cards: Six recipe cards; nine Spectrafoil cards; one SkyMotion exchange.

No. of Promo Cards: One sales sheet.
Distinguishing Factors: This set focused on the first season of Voyager. The recipes are actually scratch-and-sniff cards with real recipes.
Strange But True: SkyBox produced a special foil-embossed chase set for packs sold at Wal-Mart and a pop-up chase set for packs sold at Blockbuster Video.

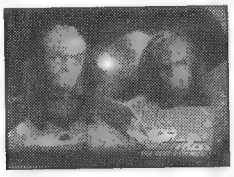
30 Years of Star Trek: Reflections of the Future Phase I

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1995
No. of Cards: 100
No. of Chase Cards: Nine gold-foil Registry Plaques; nine Ship Murals; nine foil-stamped Evolution of Technology cards; three Weapons cards; one SkyMotion Exchange Card

No. of Promo Cards: One
Distinguishing Factors: The first of what was billed as the "bible" of all that is Star Trek. Now if someone can find the chase cards.

Star Trek: TNG Episodes IV

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1996
No. of Cards: 108



No. of Chase Cards: Six foil-stamped cards; two holograms
No. of Promo Cards: One sheet
Distinguishing Factors: A continuation from the first three Episode collections, all cards, including chase cards, are sequentially numbered where the frst series left off.

30 Years of Star Trek: Reflections of Future Phase II

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1996

No. of Cards: 100
No. of Chase Cards: Nine gold-foil Registry Plaques; nine Ship Murals; nine foil-stamped Evolution of Technology cards; three Weapons cards; one SkyMotion Exchange Card

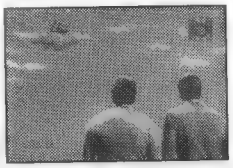
Star Trek: TNG Episodes V

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1996
No. of Cards: 108
No. of Chase Cards: Six foil-stamped cards; two holograms

No. of Promo Cards: none.
Distinguishing Factors: A continuation from the first four Episode collections, all cards, including chase cards, are sequentially numbered where the first series left off.

30 Years of Star Trek: Reflections of the Future Phase III

Producer: SkyBox
Released: 1996
No. of Cards: 100
No. of Chase Cards: Nine gold-foil Registry Plaques; nine Ship Murals; nine foil-stamped Evolution of Technology cards; three Weapons cards; one SkyMotion Exchange Card. Of special note, in an effort to legitimize the Star Trek collectible card game (also from Fleer/SkyBox), special Trek game cards obtainable only via this series are included.



No. of Promo Cards: none.
Distinguishing Factors: Backlash was so heavy on the first set of nine Ship Registry gold-foil cards (seeded at one per seven packs, this was not an easy chase set to get), SkyBox announced that collectors who bought boxes of all three Reflections sets could redeem them for an uncut Ship Registry set (which is actually the coolest chase set since the SkyMotion cards).

Star Trek All-Metal Cards

Release Date: 1996
Producer: Metallic Impressions
No. of Cards: 20 housed in collector's tin.

Star Trek: First Contact

X-Files Card Game has built-in clues to contest on USPC's World Wide Web site

The X-Files collectible card game has been recently released and by the looks of things, United State Playing Card Co. has a winner on its hands.

You see, USPC has fielded many questions, like "What do Vicious Fangs, Internal Bleeding and Fingernail Scrapings have in common?" "Why are some of the suit (or category) names on the tabs of the files crooked?" What is the deal with the random letters that appear on some of the cards?"

The answer to all of these questions is the same: The cards mentioned here are part of the embedded contest in the premiere edition of the game.

According to USPC marketing manager Ronnie Noize, these subtle variations in the cards were intentionally added as clues leading to the discovery of a hidden contest embedded in the card art of the game.

Collectors and game players will find encoded in certain game cards the web address created specially for the contest.

One clue Noize supplied is "acrostic." After the code is cracked, players who visit the special site will find detailed instructions on how to enter the main contest, which invites players to find a series of specific words hidden on the game cards.

"Those random letters again," Noize said, referring to "acrostic."

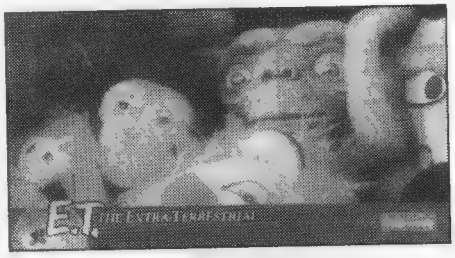
USPC is offering its first promo "No One So Paranoid" card which was handed out to fans at GenCon. The company is also offering one of every other promo card from the premiere edition, plus a T-shirt. One prize will be awarded for every word correctly identified in the contest (number of prizes equals the number of words), plus the grand prize for the first person who identifies "the whole lot of them."

Twelve consolation prizes will be drawn from the pool of entries that also correctly identified all of the words, but didn't win the grand prize. A total of 23 persons will receive 23 premiere edition promo cards.

'Island of Dr. Moreau' promo cards given away at first night screenings

If you run across cards based on the recent movie "The Island of Dr. Moreau," at card shows, don't be alarmed. The cards are not unlicensed, but were produced as promos by Inkworks for New Line Productions.

According to Inkworks spokesman Jim Eber, the eight-card set was handed out in packs at a few opening night screenings around the United States. Also, Inkworks produced an additional card which will be included with the video.



Cards in the set showcased the movie's stars – Val Kilmer and Marlon Brando – and some of the movie's monsters.

ET 'Wide' goes home

Topps canceled its ET Widevision set which was scheduled for release in October.

Three contests still open for entries

Our Space Jam and Favorite Sets of 1995 contests are still open. Details ran in the November issue of Entertainment cards.

The deadline for the Space Jam contest is Dec. 14, while the Favorite Sets of 1995 deadline is Dec. 31.

Bond Volume I box winners announced

We asked for catchy names for Bond's female companion for a not-yet-released 007 movie. The readers supplied us with plenty of humorous names, many of them unprintable.

The winners of Inkworks' James Bond Connoisseur's Collection Volume I boxes were Regina Lee of Briarwood, N.Y., Dan Cherney of Vermilion, Ohio, and Phil Possardt of Stafford Springs, Conn.

Sorayama Satin set scheduled for January by Comic Images

Sorayama Silver and Satin has been announced for a January release by Comic Images.

This is the third Comic Images set by the Japanese airbursh artist. The 72-card OmniChrome series displays Sorayama's pinup models. There will be two levels of chase cards – six Chromium cards, which will be seeded one per 12 packs, and an autographed card. Eight-card packs will carry a suggested retail price of $1.99 each.

Also on the Comic Images upcoming schedule are Royo Secret Desires (February 1997), Art Treasures of the Vatican (March) and Paul Pope Presents THB and More (TBA).

25th Philly Non-Sport Show a success

1960-1970s science fiction sets popular at Reighter's shows

By Stan Green

What is considered by many collectors and dealers to be the best non-sport show in the country took place in Philadelphia Oct. 11-12.

The 25th Philly Non-Sports Show, promoted and hosted by Frank and Phyllis Reighter, welcomed collectors who walked through the doors looking to fill their wantlists.

A majority of the 700-800 persons who walked through the doors were looking to complete their 1977 Star Wars, 1962 Mars Attack and 1978 Battlestar Galactica sets.

Many collectors had no problems checking off many of their needed cards.

The current sets that captured the most attention at the 140-table show were Olivia in OmniChrome and X-Files Season III. Many dealers also reported promo cards selling well at the show.

Speaking of promo cards, Topps issued a special Mars Attacks card which honored the Reighters for their efforts in supporting the non-sports industry.

DuoCards handed out Abbott and Costello, "Wizard of Oz" and "It's A Wonderful Life" promo cards. Abbott and Costello lookalikes walked around the show signing autographs.

Dart Flipcards promoted "The Munsters," Pepsi Premium, Smokey the Bear and "The Frighteners" at the show.

Nicole Woods signed autographs at the Sports Time booth at the show. The company also passed out promo cards for its new issues.

The Philly Non-Sport Show was the 25th for Phyllis and Frank Reighter, above. At right is a Topps Mars Attacks promo card handed out at the show.

Comic Images also gave away promo cards for its upcoming releases.

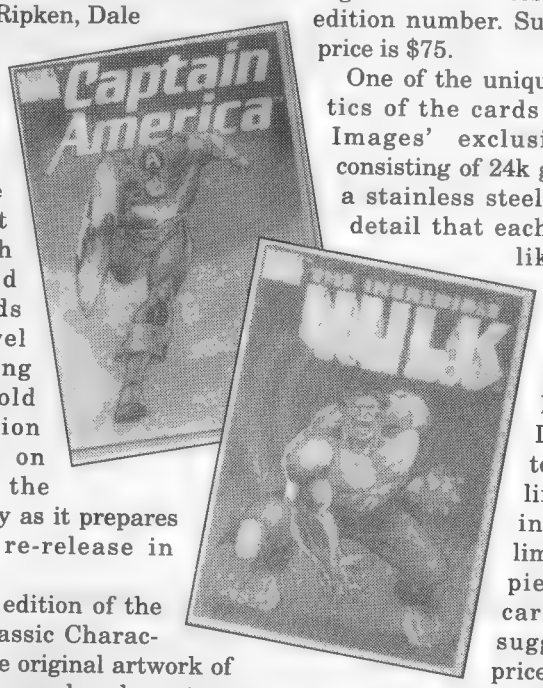
Authentic Images enters entertainment card fray

Authentic Images, which has been making gold metal cards of sports heroes like Cal Ripken, Dale Earnhardt, Michael Jordan and Wayne Gretzky for four years, is entering the entertainment card field with four 24k Gold Metal Cards based on Marvel characters, along with a 24K Gold Special Edition Ingot based on poster art for the Star Wars trilogy as it prepares for theatrical re-release in 1997.



The premiere edition of the Gold Marvel Classic Characters cards feature original artwork of four of the most popular characters in the Marvel Universe: Spider-Man, Incredible Hulk, Captain America and Silver Surfer. Each of the cards is limited to 1,996 pieces and is engraved with its own limited edition number. Suggested retail price is $75.

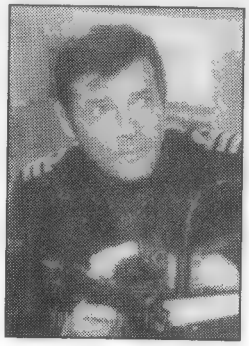
One of the unique characteristics of the cards is Authentic Images' exclusive process, consisting of 24k gold applied to a stainless steel base in such detail that each image looks like a photograph in 24k gold.

Authentic Images also is licensed with Lucasfilm Ltd. to produce the limited edition ingot. It is limited to 1,997 pieces and carries a suggested retail price of $75. Like the Marvel cards, it releases in November.

For more information, call Authentic Images at 619-682-5070.

New set for James Bond connoisseurs

Inkworks is releasing Volume Two: The '70s, the second volume of The James Bond Connoisseur's Collection, in January.



Volume Two will feature dozens of unique, never-before-seen perspectives from the five films in 007's second cinematic decade, beginning with Sean Connery's swan song, "Diamonds Are Forever," and followed by the first four Roger Moore films: "Live And Let Die," "The Man With The Golden Gun," "The Spy Who Loved Me" and "Moonraker."

There are 90 cards in the base set, with three inserts: The Women of Bond (1:11), The Movie Posters of Bond (1:24, Metalworks process) and The Golden Touch of Bond (1:108, gold foil sculpted and embossed). The 007-card packs carry a suggested retail price of $1.99.

Cornerstone releases The Prisoner in January

Cornerstone has a January release scheduled for The Prisoner, a card set based on the 1960s television show, which will be making a reappearance on the big screen with Mel Gibson as the star. Filming for the movie begins in 1997.

The 81-card set will feature color photos from the archives. There will be foil-enhanced chase cards.

The Prisoner was played by Patrick McGoohan, who later wrote and directed the series. There will be 10 cards per pack, 36 packs per box.

Collect-A-Card leaves trading card business

Collect-A-Card, the Asheville, N.C.-based company that has manufactured a variety of cards since 1989, has left the trading card business.

The company produced entertainment cards under licenses from companies including Coca-Cola, Campbell's Soup, General Motors and Harley-Davidson, and also dabbled in sports with draft-picks sets.

Company principals Neil Connor and Nelson Wheeler, partners for 25 years, will form another company and intend to continue working with primary licensors on non-card products.

"We've had six years of fun and pleasure," Connor said. "We leave with good friends in the industry. I learned quite a bit ... we look at it as time well spent."

FPG produces stickers to spice up your cards

FPG is producing a set of stickers to spice up the art of your old collectible card games. Magic Windows, releasing in January, is a unique set of more than 200 stickers that can give your cards a facelift.

The stickers don't effect the playability of the cards, just the look. They're available in 14-sticker packs.

Also on the ledger for FPG is a collectible card game based on Dark Age: The Brood, tentatively scheduled for February or March.

Ash Trading Cards moved back to June

Ash Trading Cards from Event Comics and Dynamic Forces have been moved back from December to June, 1997.

"As we worked on the cards, we felt that we were beginning to hurry some of the components," Dynamic Forces president Nick Barrucci said. "We really had to slow down to ensure the quality."

The cards will ship in time for the birthday (July 4) of their central character, Ashley Quinn.

X-Philes get new cards from Topps

As X-Files collectors finish their Season 3 sets and await the in-progress Season 4 release, Topps is issuing the X-Files Showcase in January, highlighting six groundbreaking episodes from Chris Carter's award-winning show.

Each of the six episodes is showcased on 12 super-wide cards for a total of 72 cards in the set. Each card utilizes four photos that have never before been used for trading cards. There are a pair of inserts, including six laser-cut cards, one per episode.

The six episodes are the pilot, "Deep Throat," "Squeeze," "Ice," "Fallen Angel" and "The Erlenmeyer Flask."

Nine-card packs will carry a suggested retail price of $1.99.

Marvel characters minted

The Highland Mint is producing precious metal medallions depicting Marvel characters. The first release was a Spider-Man bronze medallion; silver Wolverine medallions will release soon. Steve Skroce, who did the artwork for the Spider-Man medallion, is the regular artist on Marvel's "The Amazing Spider-Man." Adam Kubert, artist for the Wolverine medallion, has worked on "Wolverine" and will soon be taking over "The Incredible Hulk."

Spider-Man medallions (mintage 25,000) have a $9.95 SRP. Silver Wolverine (5,000) carry a price of $19.95.

American Airlines Issues First Phone Card

Frequent flier miles may attract many first-time prepaid card users

New Releases

• American Airlines has become the first domestic airline to offer a prepaid phone card that is tied in to its frequent flier program.

The AAdvantage prepaid card offers 120 minutes of long distance time for a face value of $45. The airline will offer 500 frequent flier miles with each card purchased, as well as 500 miles with each renewal. The card can be ordered by calling (800) 773-7243

Many airlines have offered frequent flier miles in conjunction with residential long distance phone service. But this is the first time an airline has offered the miles via a prepaid card. It would seem likely that other airlines will offer prepaid cards at some point in the future.

• A rare comic book cover is the subject of a new phone card issued by Argo City Co.

Phantom Lady #17 was originally issued in 1948 as part of the Fox Feature Syndicate comic books series. The comic is considered to be very rare today and is quite valuable. The artwork on the cover is by famous comic book artist Matt Baker and was controversial for its depiction of a very scantily-clad woman in bondage.

The Phantom Lady phone cards are limited to 1,000 regular edition cards and include 10 units of domestic or international calling time. The cards are available for $10 each. To order, call Argo City at (800) 345-9155.

• The final card in ACMI's Marilyn Monroe series has been released.

The card features a montage of images of America's most famous actress during various stages of her career, along with a letter "E" in the lower right hand corner of the card. When all of the cards in the series are placed together, the name "Marilyn Monroe" is spelled out.

This final card has a face value of $6 and is limited in production to 2,000 cards. For more information, contact ACMI at (901) 363-2100.

News & Notes

• MCI distributed 52,000 free phone cards during the Oct. 22 World Series contest at Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium.

The five-minute card featured the official World Series logo on the front and could be renewed for extra time. MCI is the official telecommunications sponsor for Major League Baseball.

• US West has published the results of its Collector Club survey in the latest issue of the club's newsletter.

Among those surveyed, men outnumbered women by more than a two-to-one margin (69% male; 31% female). The ages of the respondents varied, but virtually everyone who responded was at least 25 years old.

Most people have been collecting cards for more than a year (75%) and the primary reason is for a hobby (75%). While 32% said they discovered phone cards by reading about them in magazines, 23% said they were introduced to the hobby by talking to friends who were already collecting the cards.

The data is by no means considered to be definitive research on the demographics of the phone card hobby, but it is interesting in light of how little we know about the marketplace thus far.

Market Report

• The retail market for phone cards continues to grow. In a report issued by a Boston-based consulting firm, revenues from sales of prepaid phone cards are expected to grow from $750 million in 1995 to $2.5 billion in the year 2000. However, the retail segment of the phone card market is expected to grow from 30 percent in 1995 to 60 percent in 2000. A slowdown is expected for the other market segments of the industry, such as the promotional area and the collector market.

The past year has seen little growth in the collector market for phone cards. As a result, there are fewer new releases being issued for the collector market. The hottest area of the market remains the corporate/promotional card market, but the frenzy surrounding cards featuring the Coca-Cola and McDonald's logos that dominated the hobby in late 1995 and early '96 has all but disappeared. However, as long as the user market for phone cards grows, a stronger collecting market always has the potential to emerge.

MARKET REPORT

By Kurt Samuels

The Inkworks Guarantee

North Carolina company establishes itself as a leader in the entertainment card field

In August 1995, two companies with strength and ability entered the sagging entertainment card market, bringing much hype and even higher expectations.

The first was Donruss. An industry leader with past successes in the field, it was believed the company would help energize the market with good products and solid marketing and promotion.

It didn't. And less than a year after its first product, Donruss closed its entertainment card division.

The second was Graffiti, now known as Inkworks. A new company developed by former SkyBox consultant and former video store chain owner Allan Caplan, the company showed much promise after Caplan brought key industry executives as Topps' Greg Goldstein and SkyBox's Martha Modlin into the mix.

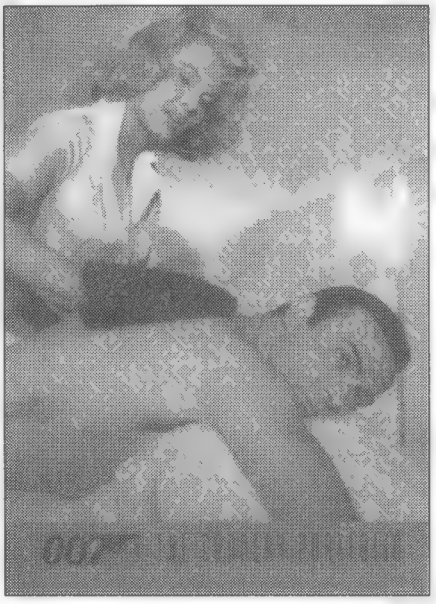
But while the company received much press due to Caplan's from-the-hip market assessments, the company had yet to establish itself as a true leader in the field.

Until now.

In 1997, Inkworks will become one of the major players in the field, releasing up to 12 products in the upcoming year, three times more than it released its first 16 months of business.

The company will continue to expand its marketing and promotional work, which already is one of the best in the business. Finally, the company will produce quality, value-oriented product.

"We wanted to earn the loyalty of our customers," Modlin said when asked what the company tried to accomplish in its first year. "We wanted to show a commitment to and an understanding to the hobby of collecting. To do that we developed our 'Inkworks Guarantee,' we resolved never to dump our product; and we strived to prove that even a small company can produce a quality product at an affordable price."



Inkworks did make big strides its first year. It began with the "Inkworks Guarantee," which assures box buyers at least one complete set of cards per box, with the company making up the difference if not.

Secondly, the company worked at keeping its production run low and its costs down. Third, the company implemented new and improved (at least for this industry) marketing ideas to promote its product.

To Greg Goldstein, this is all part of Inkworks' business strategy.

"Our strategy is this: Don't do cookie-cutter products is number one," he said. "But just as important, don't do cookie-cutter marketing. If a card company thinks of marketing as designing an ad, sending it out to the distributors and card magazines and doing that on a monthly basis, that's not marketing."

Instead, Inkworks designs its marketing around a single product, not an entire product line. The company's biggest success was its "Adventures of Pinocchio" set. While the film itself was a bomb, Inkworks was able to do things that other card companies overlook.

> "The market needs this now, and we need to do it to be successful. If the market was saying, 'We love $5 packs,' I'm sure we could come up with an incredible $5 pack. But the market is price sensitive. It's telling us we have to be careful."
> – Inkworks' Greg Goldstein
> referring to adding value to a product, thus producing a $2.99 product for $1.99

First, New Line Cinema purchased and distributed more than 40,000 packs of cards at theaters across the United States.

Secondly, the company had a cross-promotion with IBM, offering discounts on and chances of winning the movie CD-ROM.

Finally, Inkworks also marketed the product to a series of publications such as Teen Beat and others that hadn't featured cards in the past or were just ignored by the card companies. Thus more non-traditional card collectors (teen-aged girls) saw the cards and became interested in the product.

Inkworks also realizes that no matter how many new collectors come into the market, a company has to establish good faith with those still remaining. This multi-step process begins with the card license, followed by producing a quality, affordable product, then working with the market to sell the product.

The card license: "Beginning with Bond, Inkworks went after licenses that have an existing collecting base or that have the potential of having a collecting base," Modlin said. "We make sure that we select properties that a retailer is going to recognize and be able to sell."

According to Modlin and Goldstein, that begins with licenses whose genre has always been successful in entertainment cards; namely movies, television and science fiction.

Of the company's new licenses featured in the first half of 1997, two are sci-fi (two films and one TV show) and one is a kids TV show. The first is "Men in Black."

Based on a 1980s Malibu Comic, the film is described by Goldstein as "'Ghostbusters' meets 'Alien.' It's one of the best scripts to come in a long time."

The second is "Starship Troopers," a big-budget film based on a book by Robert Hedin. The science fiction TV show is "Sliders," shown on Fox.

The kids TV show is PBS' "Kratts Creatures" which, unless you have young children, is not a show that easily comes to mind. It features two brothers who teach kids (and have fun while doing it) about animals from throughout the world.

While Inkworks touts this as a "hot property," the company will have to do some nifty production, marketing and sales work to create interest.

Quality, affordable product: Price point and quality are the two cornerstones of a successful product. Collectors and dealers both want high quality at an inexpensive price. While easily said, it's not easy to do. As such, Goldstein's goal is to add value to every product, thus producing a $2.99 product for $1.99.

"The market needs this now, and we need to do it to be successful," he said. "If the market was saying, 'We love $5 packs,' I'm sure we could come up with an incredible $5 pack. But the market is price sensitive. It's telling us we have to be careful."

Inkworks adds value to packs, Goldstein said, by producing quality cards, collectible chase cards and by keeping prices low.

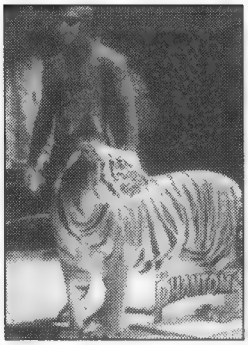
The company does this by shopping for the best prices on "all parts of the production process," he said. "We look for the best prices in every step (of producton)."

While cutting profits to keep prices low isn't financially prudent, it's a must for the current state of the industry.

"It makes my job more difficult because at the end of the day sometimes the easiest thing to do to raise profits is to raise prices," he said. "But the marketplace won't stand for it. Just ask our competitors."

The market: While the hobby market receives lip service from the card companies, it doesn't have the power financially to keep up with the mass market and other retailers and distributors. But the hobby market still provides the most valuable service to collectors.

"No matter how many sets we sell to the mass market, they will never be able to offer the service a hobby dealer can. Never," Modlin said. "If we can keep that part of collecting alive, we're going to be able to make the hobby stronger."



If everything Inkworks has been saying seems quite simple and basic, the question is why isn't all this the norm in this business.

However, said Goldstein, many of the companies still don't understand the hobby, or worse, still compare it to the sports card hobby.

> "You can't compare the entertainment market with the sports card market. There's no star power in individual cards. You have to market the entertainment product as a whole.
> "The difference between sports card collecting and entertainment card collecting is this: the sports card collector carries a (price guide) under his arm while the entertainment card collector carries a want list."
> – Inkworks' Greg Goldstein

"You can't compare the entertainment market with the sports card market," he said. "There's no star power in individual cards. You have to market the entertainment product as a whole.

"It's been said that the difference between sports card collecting and entertainment card collecting is this: the sports card collector carries a (price guide) under his arm while the entertainment card collector carries a want list."

As for those who still don't understand the difference, Goldstein has this advice.

"Anyone who doesn't know the basic differences between entertainment cards and sports cards should pack up and head out the door," he said.

Inkworks does know the entertainment card market. And the company is very optimistic about the future: Not only for the company, but also for the marketplace.

However, now is the time for the Inkworks' group of hired guns to prove that it can produce quality product on a regular basis; that it can market its product effectively on a monthly schedule; and that it can do all this at a profitable level for itself and the people who purchase their product.

Optimism and cute quotes only get a company to a certain point.

Are you ready Inkworks?
